in recent years the debate on the future institutional shape of the european union has centred on the constitutional treaty and the lisbon treaty as its less ambitious but possibly equally abortive successor the debate has thus neglected the emergence of a wide variety of new and multi level forms of governing the present volume takes stock of these debates and asks critical questions about policy conflicts and the effectiveness and legitimacy of these forms of governance under what conditions can they stand up to the high expectations that are put in them by their supporters the volume offers reflections on the notion of network governance multi level governance and the difficult issue of democratic accountability as well as empirical case studies from the structural funds area as well as from environmental policy broadly conceived seminar paper from the year 2012 in the subject politics topic european union grade 1 7 humboldt university of berlin language english abstract this essay is a comparative study of transposition records of eu directives in the case of bulgaria and romania in the years following eu accession in 2007 it will also consider the role the respective national parliament has played it thereby closes an empirical gap in contemporary researches on the topic first this study will review the academic literature on the roles that national parliaments in cee countries have played after the collapse of the soviet union with special reference to transition efforts of these countries bulgaria s and romania s cases will be further sketched out afterwards the methodology for evaluating national parliament s involvement in the transposition of eu directives will be outlined before turning the attention to the comparative analysis of the two case studies the transposition of eu regulations into national legislation is at the heart of the european integration project as this step of the policy process provides for the congruence and non discrimination of domestic policies among european union eu member states compliance with supranational law shall guarantee state practice to common standards within a union marked by economic disequilibria and political idiosyncracies of each country indeed empirical studies have revealed that timely transposition of eu directives vary across member countries as well as policy areas more generally the transposition of eu law within a fixed deadline is positively correlated to central national preferences and run rather smoothly in issue areas of secondary importance to relevant state actors in countries of central and eastern europe cee however it has been argued that eu accession would lead to some kind of compliance fatigue once the intended goal of eu membership has been reached
